

Top 5 Interior Design Trends for Your Dream Home

Breathe new life into your living space

Now that you have a dream house in mind, it's time to make it feel like home. Your home interior design should reflect your personality and needs.

Adopting a particular theme or style will make your home stand out and create a memorable feeling for loved ones and friends.

Here are the top 5 home design trends of 2022 to consider when you design your new home.

01 | MAXIMALISM

Maximalism is all about rich textiles and textures. After two years of staying mostly indoors, people want bold splashes of colours instead of boring neutrals. Don't be afraid to embrace different fabrics and palettes like leather to bring more energy into your home and boost your mood.

Layered patterns and decor are key aspects of maximalism, which can be difficult if you don't have a good eye for design. The challenge is to make sure your home remains visually cohesive without looking chaotic, although this is part of its appeal as well.

WARM MINIMALISM | 02

Unlike the typical monochrome colours of minimalistic interiors, warm minimalism combines Japanese and Scandinavian designs while utilising more natural colours of light yellows, dark and light woods.

This allows your home to retain a clean aesthetic that balances simplicity with comfort. There's a certain timeless quality to warm minimalism as well, which makes it great for homeowners looking for a modern yet comfortable vibe.

03 | CURVES IN ALL THE RIGHT PLACES

A common trend seen in many homes today are curvy furniture and decor. This is no coincidence; following the pandemic, people seek places that give them comfort and relief.

Rounded furniture is associated with calmness and femininity, while curved room lines and arched ceiling lends a touch of softness and lightness to one's surroundings. Furniture with softer edge and angle makes the place feel more friendly and welcoming, like a big hug after a long day.

NATURE AND SUSTAINABILITY | 04

Retain your connection with nature by adopting an eco-inspired design for your home. Use natural materials such as stone, clay, terracotta and oak, or add more greenery around the house to evoke a relaxed, zen-like feel.

Add earth tones and browns to make your home look like a cosy cottage in the countryside. You can even integrate sustainability by using eco-friendly materials, smart green tech, and solar panels.

05 | MODERN RETRO

Everything old is new again, especially with vintage and retro furnishings. Decorating your home with classic furniture will elicit warm, nostalgic vibes from the past, and they make a great conversation starter with guests.

Scour your local antique stores and flea markets to find these buried treasures. You may also reupholster old sofas and shelves to add new life to family furniture.

REVITALISE YOUR HOME

Having reflected on the way we spend our time indoors especially in the past year, it only makes sense to reconsider how we approach our everyday living space.

Take stock of your surroundings for inspiration. If you have an idea of how you want your home to look, take some sample designs to an experienced interior designer who can help bring the look of your dream home to life.
